4. What are the overall goals or focus of the curriculum?

The original study was created to reduce cardiovascular disease risk factors (e.g., obesity, high blood pressure, sedentary lifestyle) that often begin in childhood. Project SPARK evolved into the SPARK Programs, an organization dedicated to improving the quantity and quality of physical education for teachers and children everywhere. The SPARK programs are designed to involve all children, be more active, incorporate social skills, and emphasize both health-related fitness and skill development. It is designed to be a practical aid to elementary physical education providers—both specialists and classroom teachers—as a user-friendly document that can be implemented in the “real world.”

6. How many lessons/sessions are in the curriculum?

Middle School (6-8) Curriculum:

Aligned with the NASPE and state content and performance standards, each unit is designed to include and challenge all students' physical skills, while maintaining enjoyable, health-promoting, moderate-to-vigorous physical activity during class. Each unit includes:

- ASAPs used for warm-ups prior to Activities in each unit. Once taught, ASAPs may be student-initiated and used before, during or after taking roll.
- Activities that are sequenced by level of difficulty. The Extensions on the backside of the activities allow you to modify or add to activities, according to the development and/or grade level of your students.

Each unit plan can be used as is, or modified to suit individual needs. Variables are many, including: number of students, fitness levels, duration of PE class, days per week taught, weather, facilities, equipment, etc. Units were created using a 5 PE classes-per-week unit model for 2-4 weeks – 10-20 lessons per unit. Accuracy Analysis

Directions: The accuracy analysis should be completed by persons from the PECAT committee capable of assessing the accuracy of the health and scientific information in the written physical education curriculum. The following questions are starting points for consideration:

- Are physical activities and skill activities within the written curriculum represented accurately (e.g., are flexibility exercises represented with accurate technique, form, and safety considerations) in pictures, graphs, and written text?
- Are the sources (e.g., research materials, references) of the physical education curriculum content made clear? If so, are they reputable sources (e.g., National Association for Sport and Physical Education publications)?

The original SPARK study was funded by the Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute of the National Institutes of Health. National and state guidelines , professional organizations (such as AAHPERD) and Healthy People Objectives for the Nation were some of the factors/resources considered during curriculum development. SPARK collaborators and web resources are included on the SPARKfamily.org website under “Resource Materials.”

- Are data, information, and sources of information up to date and accurately interpreted?

Up-to-date information (on physical education, physical activity, public health and physical fitness, NASPE Standards for Physical Education, NASPE Guidelines for Physical Activity, research benefits of physical activity, etc.) is included under Resource Materials on the SPARKfamily website.

- Does the curriculum use accurate and appropriate terminology (e.g., “physical education class” versus “gym class”)? Yes
- Are information, examples, scenarios, etc., relevant to the students’ lives? Yes

Acceptability Analysis

Directions: The acceptability analysis should be completed by people from the PECAT committee who are knowledgeable about the school expectations for physical education material; state and local school district policies, requirements, frameworks, and standards that guide physical education; and the physical education needs of students. Review the curriculum to determine whether there is anything in the curriculum (e.g., text, pictures, activities) that might:
Be incompatible with school norms, student needs, or perspectives of families and the community;

Promote biased or stereotypical perceptions of individuals or groups on the basis of personal characteristics such as race, ethnicity, gender, religion, culture, or sexual orientation; or
Be inconsistent with state statutes, state or district policy, requirements, or standards.
Some questions to consider when analyzing acceptability include the following:

Does the curriculum address the physical education and physical activity needs of all students in the school, including those with disabilities and those who are not athletically gifted?

Each individual unit contains Inclusive Strategies for all activities. The SPARKfamily.org website includes a section that is a primer on differentiated learning and includes activities for students having special needs. Strategies are presented to create activity environments that enable every child, regardless of genetics, ability level, or gender, to feel successful every day.

Does the curriculum reflect the perspectives, diversity, and needs among students, families, and the community?

Sample from 6-8 SPARK World Games Unit:

Learning games and traditions from other cultures can be an enlightening experience with the potential to foster respect and other socially responsible behaviors that can last a lifetime. Many modern countries are multicultural in composition, with a blend of various traditions and values all within the same geographical borders. It's valuable for students to recognize and respect diverse aspects of their communities so that all of its citizens are able to contribute in a meaningful way. Therefore, Multicultural Education teaches students about the diversity found in the local and national community.

Likewise, Global Education teaches students about the diversity found at an international level. Students benefit by experiencing global diversity in a physical activity setting in order to foster respect for traditions and cultures that they may not otherwise discover around them. This unit can be used as a blend of both Multicultural and Global Education and is aligned with NASPE and state content and performance standards. Students may already know and love some of the games and activities found in this unit. They may be experiencing others for the first time. Encourage students to explore their own communities for more multicultural ideas and challenge them to search the globe for games that keep the world healthy and active.

Does the curriculum address issues required by special statute or policy including the requirements identified in the physical education framework or course of study?

SPARK alignment with individual state physical education content standards are available on the SPARK website.

Is there curriculum information or material that violates physical education requirements or mandates?

No

Is there anything in the curriculum sponsorship, information, or materials that reflects an inappropriate marketing message or improper attempt to influence teachers and students (e.g., marketing a particular brand or product, advocating interest that might conflict with the school's mission, advocating an interest that conflicts with the physical education outcomes and objectives)?

No

Feasibility Analysis

The feasibility analysis should be completed by persons from the PECAT committee who know whether the physical education curriculum content, materials, and instructional strategies can be successfully implemented and utilized in local schools. Complete each item below. Record notes to justify scores and to inform PECAT committee discussions and decisions.

1. The curriculum can be reasonably implemented within the capacity (e.g., level of training, certification in teaching physical education) of existing physical education teachers.

Yes

Notes: The SPARK manual is designed to be a practical aid to Middle School Physical Education providers—both specialists and classroom teachers. SPARK provides support and consultation to purchasers of the curriculum, as well as free quarterly newsletters via e-mail and regularly scheduled “webinars”.

2. The curriculum can be implemented within the available instructional time.

Time can be adjusted

Notes: Each unit plan can be used as is, or modified to suit individual needs. Variables are many, including: number of students, fitness levels, duration of PE class, days per week taught, weather, facilities, equipment, etc. Units were created using a 5 PE classes-per-week unit model for 2-4 weeks – 10-20 lessons per unit. The Extensions provided on activities allow teachers to meet the changing needs of students as they become more skilled and fit.

3. The curriculum can be implemented with the existing physical education facilities and equipment. Some activities call for specialized equipment. However, generic equipment will often work well.

Affordability Analysis

The affordability analysis should be completed by people who are knowledgeable about curriculum development, purchasing, implementation, and revision costs; costs in changing school operating procedures; and resources available for covering these costs. Complete each item below. Record notes to justify scores and inform PECAT committee discussions and decisions.

1. What is the initial cost of curriculum materials?

Items	Unit Cost	Number of Units Needed	Total Initial Cost (Unit cost times number of units needed)
Core curriculum (breakdown of separate grade-specific or content-specific materials might be necessary)	$		$
Necessary instructional materials not included as part of core curriculum (may include cost of equipment, videos, CDs, master transparencies, etc.)	$		$

Notes and comments:

6. Identify needed changes in staffing, facilities, professional development, and class schedule so that lessons and student assessment protocols in the curriculum can be implemented as written. Briefly note any changes that require a cost in dollars, time, or effort.
7. Consider any costs that would be involved in revising the curriculum to ensure that the
